Introduction

The Relationship Chart

One and one make more than two, and when two people get together a third party emerges: the couple. As a couple, a team, a dynamic duo, you both become part of something larger that can give you greater power and potential than either has alone. As the two of you become one, a totally new horoscope emerges, called the relationship chart, which describes what you have become by linking up, what your special, mutual universe looks like from inside and out. It may be very different than either of you alone, or it may just reinforce you both, but it is what you are together, so embrace it. When you move to a new location, you modify that chart, and your image together and what you can do with it may change significantly. As with your individual charts, you have an inside that doesn't change with a move and an outside that changes with locality. To see if you have the best possible fit in this new place, here's a look at both.

The relationship chart for a couple is calculated in much the same way as a regular birth chart, only using the midpoint in time between the two birth dates, and the midpoint in space between the two birthplaces. When a relationship chart is relocated in Horizons, it keeps its own angles rather than using the angles of the relocated natal chart (as is done for other chart types).

Angles in Signs

Ascendant in Aquarius

You can easily find yourselves being all things to all people here without having to get close to any one person or side of the issue. That can afford you comfortable distance or just make you seem distant, depending. But on all accounts, you'll be unbiased toward any one choice, so you'll always seem fair.

Midheaven in Scorpio

You may find that you're a bit of a mystery to people here because you don't seem to take sides and therefore it's unclear which side you're on. The fact is, you're truly independent and see the whole picture, but partisans may find that hard to believe. If you must seem to have an agenda, make it seem larger than and inclusive of theirs.

Planets on Angles

Any planet on one of the angles (Ascendant, MC, Descendant, IC) of your relocation chart will be greatly strengthened when you are at the place of relocation, very much like if it were on the angles of your natal chart. If the Sun is on an angle, you'll have more confidence; if Mars is there you'll have more energy, and so on. Moreover, you don't have to actually go there to get the effect. Having a planet on a relocated angle will accentuate that place for you even if you are only doing business with people there over the phone. You have an accentuated quality to people in such places that you may not have elsewhere.

Relationship Saturn On IC (Strong)

You probably won't find your quarters here to be large or expansive, nor will you particularly need them to be. Spartan living together may be quite sufficient, because you have something else more important to do than hang around home. Where you can save on yourselves, you can add to your achievements.

Saturn in Fourth House

Expect your quarters to be smaller here and less fuss made about them -- not entirely because of economics, but because of your mutual taste. Classic lines beat rococo for sure, and dual function rooms and furniture get you more for less. Ultimately, it's about lean elegance -- try it out here.

Relationship Venus On MC (Mild)

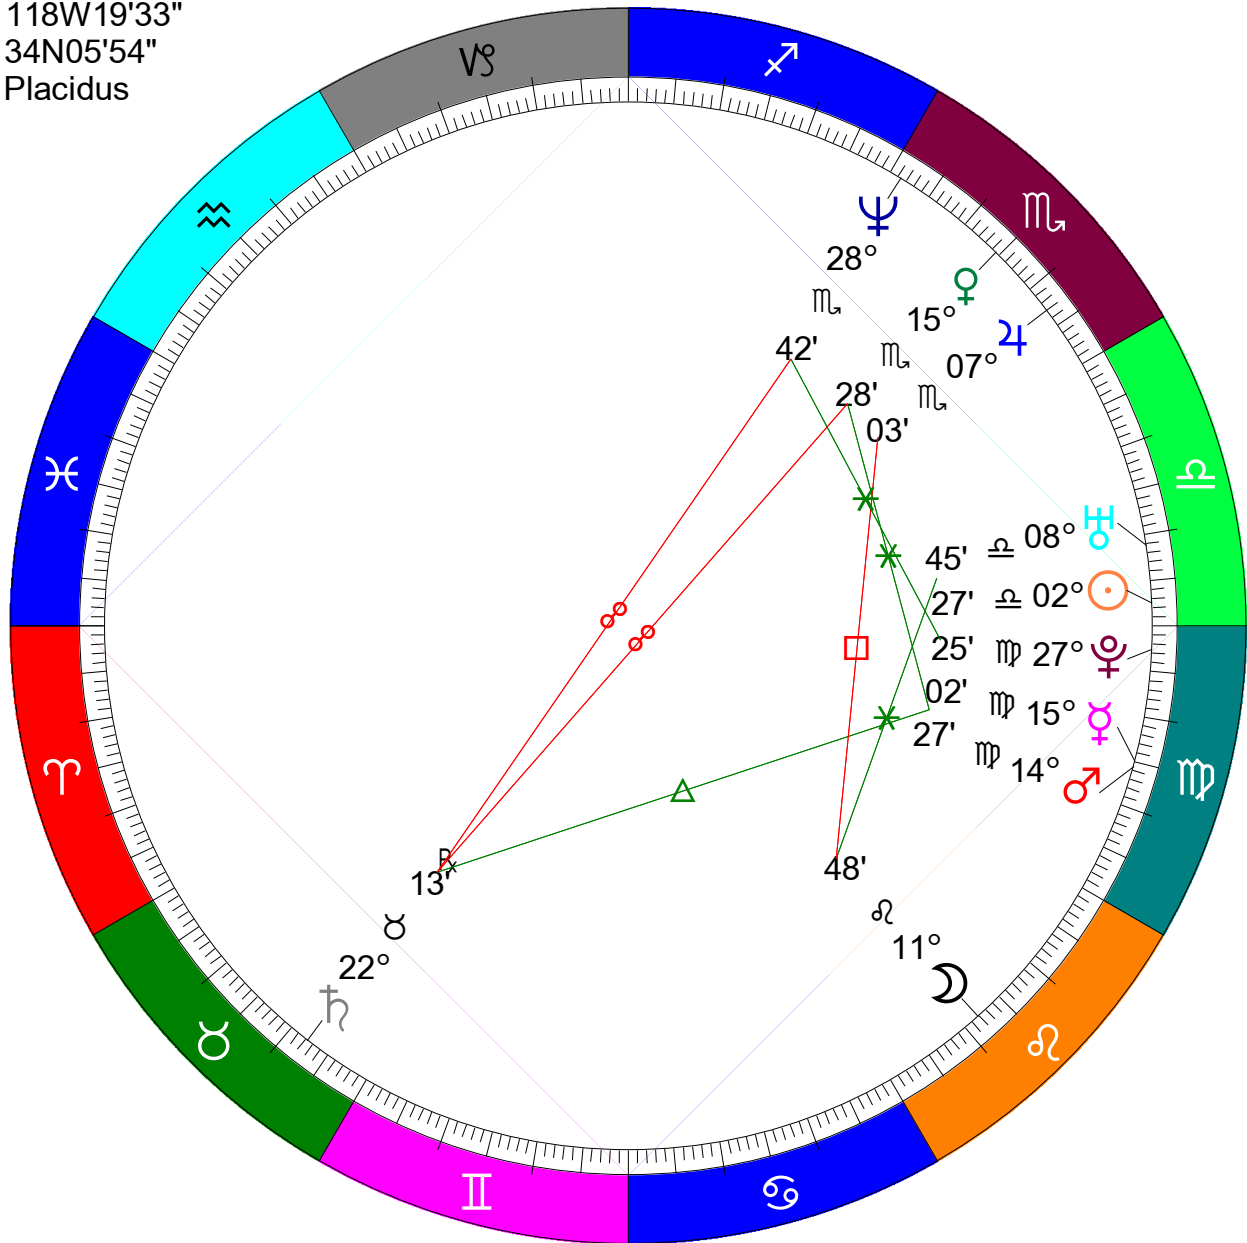

You're likely to start out with a good reputation here together, even if you've not yet done anything special to deserve it. You just inspire praise, and you'll continue to unless you really drop the ball. What you have, and are, is what they want -- or at least they think they do -- and don't you tell them otherwise.

Venus in Ninth House

Your desire for elbow room, both physically and spiritually, will be met here in ways you may not foresee at first. The more you understand the big picture here, the more pleased with your mutual prospects in it will become. It's like the concept is right here in ways you only wish it could be elsewhere.
